Why Become a Trick Shot Artist

Mastering a fair number of the shots in the previous 16 chapters is all well and good. The shots are, after all, fun to execute. And each carries with it an element of suspense. Will it work or won't it? You may be comfortable not having your failures be witnessed by others. But on the other hand, there's nothing like the adulation that will be showered upon you from an appreciative audience following a successful effort.

At this point I'm going to make the assumption you are reading this chapter because you have a sincere desire to impress people with your skill at trick shots. But in case you're still not yet sure about your future in showbiz, let's look at a few reasons why you may wish to give your career as a trick shot artist some further consideration.

You should become a trick shot entertainer if:

You like to be the center of attention.

You are a ham, a natural born showoff.

You want to impress people.

You have a romantic interest you'd like to woo with your charisma.

You like to be the life of any pool party.

You like to have fun.

You are looking for a fantastic new hobby.

You want an excuse to hold a party to show off your new pool table.

Your therapist says becoming a trick shot artist is the perfect antidote for shyness.

You just love to see people smile around a pool table.
